Body of the Dead President in Hopkins County Not As Bad Buried at Canton As Reported.

Tuesday And Body Viewed By Thousands,

Cauton, O. Sept. 19.—After a State funeral at Washington Tuesday, the body of President McKinley was taken to Cauton Wednesday and delivered to his townsmen. Every branch of the State Government was represented. The body was allowed to lie in state at the courthouse during the afternoon, where the state at the courthouse during the afternoon, where the state at the whom had known him inite, passed in file to look upon the now searcely familiar countenance. In the eventing the casket was closed and taken to the McKinley home. Mrs. McKinley's coudition was such that she could not participate in the funeral services today in the little church where thirty years ago she was married. The final funeral services to day in the little church where thirty years ago she was married. The final funeral services to day in the little church where thirty years ago she bort and simple. The body was then escorted by an imposing procession to Westlawn cemetery, where it was placed in a receiving vauit.

Only the hitching post at the curb in froat of the residence had been swathed in black by friends in order that it might conform to the general scheme of mourning decoration that had been adopted.

Features Scarcely Familiar.

Sad as was the procession which bore the body to the courthouse, where it lay in state this afternoon, it could not compare with the sad-ness of that endless double line of people who streamed steadily through the dimly-lighted corridors of the building from the time the coffin was opened until it was taken home to the sorrowing widow at mightfall. Perhaps the great change that had come upon the countenance moved the people more than the sight of the familiar features.

The signs of discoloration which appeared upon the brow and cheeks yesterday at the state ceremonial in the rotunds of the Capitol in Washington had deepened. The ighs had become livid. All but two of the lights from the chandeler above the head were extinguished in order that the change might appear less noticeable, but every one who viewed the body to doay remarked the darkened features and the ghastly lips.

Prisoners in Manila Who Have Under gons Herrible Toctures.

Antanciós Siblet, Esteban Severidad and Alberto Salmon, three native prisoners in Bilbid, who were sentenced by the Spanish courts to eight years imprisonment in 1898 for robbery alleged to have been committed by them in 1909, have saked for their release, says the Manila American, on the ground that they are innocent of the crime, and that they have now served about eight years. They tell a story of torture and inhumanity practiced by the Spanish efficials in their case that puts the inquisition to shame.

The inouse of a Spaniard was entered and robbed by parties unknown in the summer of 1893. Eight men, including the three petitioners, were arrested on suspicion. In order to sexure a confession the officials tortured the prisoners in every conceivable manner. They strung them up by the thumbs, beat them with butts of rifles; applied the water cure and used the thumb server on them. To avoid punishment five confessed to a crime in which the three men claimed not one participated.

Their trial did not take piace until five years after the arrest, and all this time they were held in prison. Four of the prisoners had died from the result of injuries sustained from the tortures inflicted, and a fifth lied while the trial was in progress. Each before he died declared that he had made a false confession to avoid terrible tortures inflicted, and a fifth lied while the confession to avoid terrible tortures confession to avoid terrible tortures.

cording to the presenters story they were all simple-minded farmers who happened to be in the town and were the first hombres that the police happened to pick up. They state that they have reason to believe that the house was robbed by the police, and they were made the victims, as no offort was made to develop the real criminals, and the only evidence offered in court was the forced confession of the prisoners.

A New Flooring.

A New Brocrag.

A German chemist is reported to have found means, by mixing sawdust with certain chemicals, of producing a flooring which is as hard and smooth as marble or concrete and yet elastic and warm to walk on. It is stated to be fireproof, impervious and sound-deadening, and although laid down for some years to have in no instance-showed signs of bulging or cracking. It is laid down in a moist state without seams and thereby allows of the corners and sides being lows of the corners and sides rounded off, an important point from a hygienic point of view. It hardens completely in 48 hours.

AN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT. Curious, Though Disastrous, Experie

in a French Forest.

A lady was æntering the forest of St. Germain, near Paris, in an auto mobile recently when the machinery became out of order. The passengers brought the car to a standstill in order to overhaul the engines, when almost immediately a violent explosion occurred and the car was enveloped in Ammes. The sussengers had a naroccurred and the car was enveloped in flames. The passengers had a nar-row escape. The liquid fuel in the casterior of the car overflowed and became ignited, and it was feared that the burning stream of oil would run among the bushes fringing the road, setting them alight, in which event the forest would have been involved and widespread damage caused. The forest would have been involved and evidespread damage caused. est fire, however, was averted by the est Inc., however, was averted by the felling of a few trees and the cutting away of the undergrowth in the vicin-ity of the burning vehicle. The mo-tor car burned fiercely for about an hour, leaving only a mass of tangled steel and ironwork. The value of the autemobile was $5,000.—Scientific American.

EMPLOYES' REFERENCES.

A World of Remer Farnished by Some of Them.

There is quite a small world of humor hidden in the characters given by some English employers to their servants; and it is almost a pity that, for reasons that are obvious, it rarely some to light.

According to London Tit-Bits a humorous North London dector not long ago gave the following significant character to a coachman, whom he was by no means sorry to see the back of: "First year, a dutiful and efficient servant. Second year, an indulgent master. Third year, an indulgent macter that the coachman got his mext employment.

Many years ago a whimsical Yorkshire vicer, when his sevents annual.

Many years ago a whimsical York-ahire vicar, when his servants applied to him for a character, invariably gave it in Latin, to their mystification and delight; and as comparatively few later employers were able to read the vicar's writing or understand his Latin, these characters answered admirably.

To a drunken gardener he gave a character, which, when translated, read thus: "Johannes H— is one of those rare characters who have a genius for doing the wrong thing at the wrong time on the rare occasions when they do anything at all. Under other conditions he would have made an excellent eastern potentate, where the chief qualification is to do nothing luxuriously; but from the days of Adam downward there never was a man by nature and inclination less amount of the thing was that the man was as proud of his character. The humor of the thing was that the man was as proud of his character, "written in a furrin language," as any hare of his Victoria Cross; and it was accepted by his next employer as a tribute to his efficiency.

There was no ambiguity about the character given by another employer to his groom. It contained only three words: "Discharged with ignomiate the character given by another employer as a testimonial to his character. A Yorkshire squire, when asked by a farm laborer whose services he would be an irreproachable servant if at were not for his devotion to Eachus, his chronic indisposition to industry, and his systematic indifference to instructions." The man looked at the character, speed that will be a step in the right direction, "the squire said, with a smile. And the man walked proudly off with his nainque testimonial.

It was another Yorkshire employer who gave this satirical character to a discharged bearvant, who showeds it with pride until the "sting in its tail" was a notified to it to him.

was pointed out to him:

A better servant could not be.
Reverse all this, you have 3. 7.
The following humorous character given by a lady to her cook was read in a London court a few months ago:
The first month I was convinced 1
had got a treasure; the second month
I was doubtful about it; the thind month I was devoulty thankful to get the treasure out of the house."
An interesting libel action resulted a few years ago from a character given of her cook by one lady to another, to whom the girl had applied for employment. The character was, on the face of it, anything but a desirable one. It ran thus: "I have only had one maid comparable with Louisa X——, and she ended her days in a lunctic asylum."

Here was, prima facie, a case for ex-

Innetic asylum."

Here was, prima facie, a case for examplary damages; but the defendant was able to prove that the dementic who ended her days in a lunatic asylum was in all ways case lent, and that the testimonial was an admirable one and by no means libelous. But why the good lady should have introduced that equivocal reference to a lunatic asylum was never made clear.

In another case a lady had to pay substantial damages for an exhibition of a pricfulness against a discharged servant.

Discarded Furniture of Royalty Aluxa Burned According to Old Custom.

His majesty intends to clear out a good deal of the old, furniture in Windsor castle and replace them with his own. Having this in view, old res-idents have been on the lookout for signs of a bonfire somewhere in the precincts of the castle, for in past times, when any cheirs and tables and other articles therein were con-demned, it was the practice to have them burned. The object of this was to prevent pieces of furniture stamped with the queen's monogram from be-ing let loose, as it were, and so allowed to drift into the hands of brokers, and thence into the possession of persons to drift into the hands of brokers, an thence into the possession of person having no right to them, but willin to pay almost any price to be able t display such royal articles in their own houses. It was a wasteful expedient, but one can understand the need of such a precaution. There have heen so many instances of reverse to the control of the con need on such a precutation. Since have been so many instances of roya gifts and discarded articles bein found in shops and stores that som means of prevention are quite neces-sary. But up to the present tim there have been no indications of holocaust.—Modern Society.

The Peking Gazette can hardly be described as a newspaper, says the Shanghai Mercury, and besides it circulates only among the official classes.
One of the schemes of the ill-fated reformers was to have an official paper on western lines under government auspices. The Universal Gazette now states that Prince Ching is eager to revive the idea and is consulting the newspaper laws and regulations in sogue in western lands. His idea is that at the beginning the paper should the newspaper laws and regulations in vogue in western lands. His idea is that at the beginning the paper should be free to all so as to enlighten the people. It would appear as if the prince realized the power of the press in the occident and sees how it can builtized by the government in China. We wish the project every success.

By the time the average man ha read that seductive description he is on his way to add one more to the crowd of men who make the men's shirt departments of the big shops look like winter Monday bargain

Mr. Brooklyn was not so weakly led. Mrs. Brooklyn buys all his shirts, and he would never have fallen and been the cause of the introduction of the elbow sleeve shirt if he had no ellow sieeve shirt if he had not chanced one evil day last week to pass along Fulton street in the shopping district. Mr. Brooklyn knew nothing of the evils of the summer shirt bargain habit, and in his innocence he fell at once when the rainbow-like vision of a window full of shirts fell with the summer with the summer with the summer was the same with the summer was the same with the summer was the same pon his eye with the sign in big let-

"Maria always pays two dollars for my shirts, I believe," soliloquized Mr. Brooklyn, "and I think I heard her say the other day that I needed a couple more. I had better drop in and save her the trouble of coming down. These are certainly very reasonable in price."

Mr. Brooklyn dropped in, selected two comfortable-looking blue and white shirts, which were really a credit to his good taste, and ordered them sent home. Then he took his first lessent home.

It was in vain that the clerk held up to view beautiful pink shirts, and red shirts, green shirts, lavender shirts, with shirts and combinations of all colors. The masculine mind is not so different from the feminine, and the more the clerk dilated upon the pink and lavender shirts the more Mr. Brooklyn desired his first choice of blue shirts and nothing else.

There were only a few last things to do before the house was closed, and while Mrs. Brooklyn was attending to those Mr. Brooklyn went upstairs to dress, and for a few minutes everything was quiet. Then came a roar from the upper floor:

TENDING BAR.

Much Larger Salaries Paid Than Is Generally Supposed. "The fellow who loor upon the business

many barkeepers in New York at the imore swell places that make $400 or $500 a month. This not a bad salary. Of course there are many who get much less, the salaries ranging from $251 to $500 a month. The same conditions prevail in Europe in the larger places that are frequented by the wealthy. Of course there is a good substantial reason for paying these large salaries in the more noted places of the country. The barkeeper in this age has to be something more than an awkward handler of beer mugs and plain old whisky glasses. Mixing drinks is one of the new arts, and there are many drinks in the late schedule. In the more aristocratic places the bartender must be a past master in the art of mixing. He must know the ingredients of all the drinks, and he must get them up quickly, daintily, gracefully, else he will offend the drinking dilettante. This condition has brought about a demand for the best men in the business, and has developed a spirit of competition between the finer places of the country. Here in New Orleans there are many high-priced bartenders, some of them getting as much as $175 a month, and there are many who, get $100 and $125. So when it comes down to the question of finance, the position of barkeeper is somewhat if the man studies his business and manages to fall into the right berth. These changed conditions are responsible for the fact that the barkeepers of the few years ago. They are as a rule men of refinement and education, and they are nice, polished, gentlemanly fellows."

Miss Bila Gardner, Cumberland Presbyterian missionary in Japan, says: "Osteopathy has done so much for me that were I choosing a secular vocation for a life work I certainly choose it; and were it not for the time and money required to acquire the knowledge I would killed to have it as a help in my work in the mission field."

he possesses and for several years will continue to possess, a natural amonopoly of this skill. The unique acture of this skill whereby heef fects cures in diseases hitherto unsuccessfully treated, and at the same time copes with equal success in diseases curable by other methods, together with the scarcity of men and women possessing the new power of healing, causes Oateopathy to rank first among the professions in respect to pecuniary remuperation.

In point of honor and honorable nees, Osteopathy ranks co-equal with the other intellectual professions. From all the above causes, Osteopathy is growing rapidly by the constant addition to the ranks of men and women from the ranks of men and women from the ranks of college men and women.
